There may be occasions when we choose to hold a high level of collective investment schemes, cash and/or money market instruments. If units are held within the ISA RHI wrapper then income is currently paid at the rate of 0.5p per unit per month.

- Greece debts proved beneficial to the UK Government

Fund Manager's comment

During January the price of the units in the Regular High Income Fund appreciated by 0.8% and although we have no official benchmark, this compares to a rise of 0.7% in the FTSE All-Gilt Index and a decline of 4.3% in the FTSE 350 High Yield Index. (Source: Financial Express Analytics as at 31st January 2010, total return, bid-to-bid, pounds sterling.)

There was increasing caution in equity markets with disappointing news from China, and America, where Mr. Obama decided it was time to take a robust stance against the banking sector. In Europe Greece began to teeter on the edge of bankruptcy. Fixed interest markets in the UK remained largely unmoved, especially after the Bank of England met early in January but gave no hint about when they were likely to cease the practice of quantitative easing.

Towards the end of the month the confusion surrounding Greece and its debts actually proved beneficial to UK government stocks as investors once again sought safety in UK government bonds rather than riskier asset classes. An auction of £3.25bn Treasury 3.75% stock 2019 was covered nearly 2.4 times. During the month we continued to purchase issues by the European Investment Bank in preference to government bonds. The yield was higher and the investment status just as secure as the better sovereign bonds.

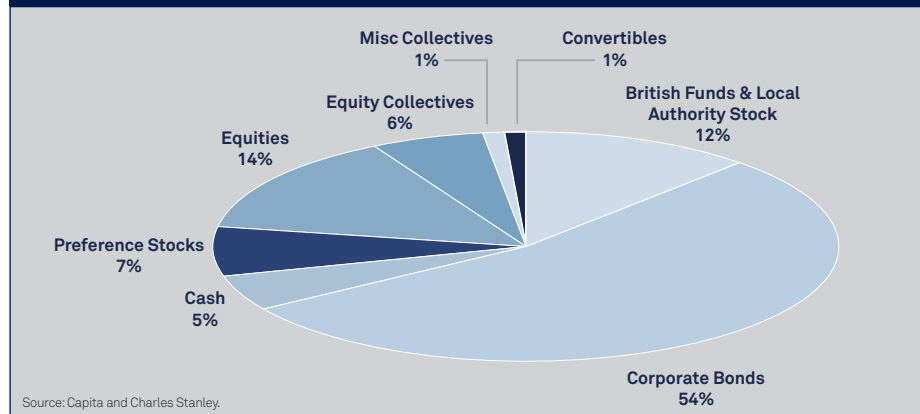

Our substantial holdings of Scottish Power 6.625% Bonds and Compass Group 7.125% Bonds were redeemed in the second part of January and it is no easy task looking for reinvestment opportunities which match the high yield and high qualities of these underlying companies.
